

Moving Made Easy ... Try Portable Storage

Portable Storage is fast gaining popularity as a means of household transportation in the United States. The system has developed over years because of some disadvantages perceived in the traditional transportation business. The traditional transportation business offered no flexibility in terms of loading and unloading of items. A consumer with a housing crisis at a new destination cannot be helped by the traditional trucking system and has to rely on his friends or book his luggage in warehouses which is a very costly proposition. The new portable storage system addresses these problems quite effectively.

Portable Storage in comes in two forms; moving services and storage services. In the moving services, portable storage units are delivered at the customers residence. Contractual flexibility allows the customer to load and unload the items flexi-time. Loading is made easier as the containers are ergonomically designed and do not require a ramp to load items as was the case in a normal truck based system. A large variety of portable storage units are on offer compared to the variety offered by traditional trucking system. For example, Portable Storage companies offer containers of differing sizes such as 5X5 feet sized container for loading belongings from a studio flat, 5X10 feet sized container for a one bedroom apartment, 10X15 feet for two/three bedroom apartment, 10X20 feet for a three/four bedroom apartment and a 10X30 feet for a larger house. Thus the customer has the flexibility to choose from a range of sizes according to his requirements.

Even during the move, the Portable Storage units loaded on trucks are kept under constant surveillance by incorporating the latest in GPS tracking technology, so the customer know the position of his luggage at all times. The storage services offer to keep the customers belongings in secure company warehouses till such time the customer is ready to accept the delivery of the items. This gives the customer time to arrange for a new house or a new storing place at his new destination which was not the case with traditional trucking services.

Compared to the predicament one would have to face without such a convenient moving option, storing services are definitely reasonably priced. Portable Storage companies also offer to store your vehicles and boats. Home storage of wines in environment controlled conditions is yet another service offered by portable storage companies. Portable Storage has thus evolved into a diverse business ... a new innovation in the transportation field.
