

Your news your way

Today we are able to learn about things from all over the world while sitting in the comfort of our own home. A broad range of knowledge and information can be accessed at any time. A mom in Kansas can find out the weather forecast in Florida to plan for her upcoming vacation and she doesn't have to wait for the weather on the news. A stockbroker in Taiwan can find out how their stocks in New York are doing without having to wait for the business section in the paper the next day. With your curiosity as your guide you can scour the world over to learn anything you want and now that information can be brought to you. RSS Feeds are quickly becoming a new asset in your ability to find out more.

The RSS of RSS Feeds stands for really simple syndication. An RSS Feed brings the information you want to you as it is published. As you explore the internet you might find websites that publish information that you are interested in, things that you want to hear more about as they happen. The website might have an RSS feed option that you can register for that will allow you to receive updates from that website. So instead of having to surf the web when you want to stay on top of the news you can have the information sent to you. Some websites are so organized with the use of their RSS Feeds that you can receive updates on very specific topics. Like to keep up with the headlines from NPR? They have RSS Feeds. Is there a blog that you like to follow? Have their posts sent to you. If they post new information and RSS Feed can keep you posted. There are multiple ways to check the updates on your RSS feeds. Some internet browsers carry the RSS Feeds option, just like a favorites section, that can usually be identified by the little orange tab, or some websites can be customized to display the RSS Feeds you want to follow. Some websites also offer the option of sending the updates to your cellular device so you can be updated anywhere there is phone service. While RSS Feeds to internet browsers and sites are usually free standard texting fees apply when updating to a cell phone. In a busy world where time is money and knowledge is power you can stay ahead with RSS Feeds and let the world come to you.
